DOWN
KEEF OFF MAJORCA
Last Two Ships to Sink Are the
Maid and the Maiden
Women Beside Steamship
Officials—Three—American
Among Lost.

MARSEILLES.—Special.—Within sight of the spot where the wrecked steamer General Chanzy lies on Majorca reef, where she went to disaster Friday, sending 156 of the 157 persons she carried to their deaths, two more vessels—sailers—were wrecked Saturday.

Reports say that every soul on board both of them perished, swelling the death list of the storm that is sweeping the Mediterranean by at least fifty.

The vessels were the Maid and the Maiden. The latter is believed to be the French bark of that name, owned and commanded by Gaultier de Kermel. She was built in 1882, based from Genoa, and was of 324 tons. The Maiden was reported to be a larger vessel.

Marseilles today is in a panic of grief. Hundreds of relatives of those lost on the General Chanzy disaster crowded the piers throughout the night, braving the cold storm and waiting anxiously for the dispatch of survivors to those who are lost beyond all hope.

Along the Cannibiers, the boulevard which leads to the Old Port, a packed mass of mourners today defied the police. A heavy force was on the spot to prevent an outbreak on the part of the desperate, grieving crowd.

Weep for Relatives.
Women, crying piteously for word of husbands, sons, brothers or sweethearts, crowded the office of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. Again and again some of the more desperate attempted to hurl themselves into the sea in a paroxysm of suffering.

Three Americans Lost.
Time and again these badly reacquainted were taken back, but a little while and the three were safely in the water. The crowd was swelled today by panic-stricken inquirers for the safety of those who were lost. The only word received this morning corroborated the stories of the loss of the General Chanzy, save one—Marcel Rodet, the Algerian customs official, who clung to a wreckage and was picked up by a Frenchman.

From Palma, on the island of Majorca, today came word of the loss of three Americans. The coast in the vicinity of the reef between Majorca and Minorca, where the steamer was wrecked, is dotted with corpses and a patrol was established today for their recovery.

The company's records show that among those on board the General Chanzy were three Americans. The American consul began making inquiries into this report.

DREAFFUL CHANGE
Mrs. Jones was in a Serious Condition Before She Helped Herself With Cardui, the Woman's Tonic.

Dexter, Tex.—"I certainly was in a serious condition when I wrote you for advice," writes Mrs. Calvin Jones, of Dexter, Tex.

"I suffered a great deal with those dizzy, fainting spells, but after taking several bottles of Cardui, relief finally came."

"Cardui prepared my system for the dreadful change and when it came it was not half as bad as those dizzy spells I had before. I now help every day with the housework and am getting along fine."

"Cardui is really fine for female complaints. My neighbors praise it and so do I."

"Take Cardui when you feel ill in any way, weak, tired, miserable, or under the weather."

No matter what the immediate cause, it will help to brace you up, give you new force and vim, help you to throw off the trouble that troubles you."

Cardui will not interfere with any other medicine you may be taking. It is a gentle, harmless, non-mineral, non-poisonous, non-intoxicating tonic, that every woman ought to have when she is looking for health, strength, beauty and vitality."

J. T. JEWETT DIES
IN WEST VIRGINIA
Stricken While Walking on Street and Soon Passed Away.

RICHMOND, VA.—Special.—Jonathan T. Jewett, one of the most prominent citizens of Manchester, died Friday night at Alderson, W. Va., where he was stricken a Saturday afternoon while walking on the streets.

Mr. Jewett left this city Tuesday in the best of health, on business for the John T. Hesser Coal Company, whom he has been the general sales agent for years. His family was notified yesterday afternoon of his illness and his wife and a number of relatives left for his bedside, but did not find him before he expired.

His remains will arrive here tomorrow afternoon over the Chesapeake and Ohio at 2:30 o'clock, and will be taken to his residence, 1505 Porter Street, Manchester, N. H.

Mr. Jewett was a lifelong resident of Manchester, and had been actively connected with its business and social life since his boyhood. He was a member of Central Methodist church and for years had been secretary of the official board.

Mr. Jewett is survived by his wife, Mrs. J. T. Jewett, of Manchester, and James M. Jewett, of Port Norfolk.

The funeral will take place tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from Central Methodist church.

Individuality of Business Girls.
Last winter a bright, wide-awake girl took a clerical position with a firm famous for its petty treatment of employees. She was set to work in a small, untidy room, lined with desks and tables. At each desk sat a girl, dissatisfied and churlish, her individuality fading, her ambition rising no higher than to enter that room each day, and to leave it at the end of eight, not a minute earlier, and not a minute later.

She was not alone. There were other girls, all of them with the same look, the same air, the same attitude. They were all of them, in the office, the same. They were all of them, in the office, the same. They were all of them, in the office, the same.

JAMES C. SMITH PASSES AWAY
Ever Since His Defeat for Re-election "Junky" Smith's Health Had Been Failing—Home and Business House Destroyed by Fire.

RICHMOND, VA.—Special.—James C. "Junky" Smith, for many years City Sergeant of Richmond, and a prominent junk dealer, died Saturday morning at 5 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Frank L. Wells, at Dorchester, Mass., a suburb of Boston, where he was in an attempt to recover his lost health.

Death was due to heart trouble. Ever since the campaign last fall when he was defeated for re-election by John L. Satterthwaite, Smith had been on the decline, and recently his friends advised him to go away for a few days to the effect that his health was improving, and that he hoped shortly to return to Richmond.

Coming on top of his defeat for re-election, Smith's health was rapidly declining. His home in Henrico county, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday morning, October 31st. Next his place of business was laid in ruins by fire.

Mr. Smith is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Minnie S. Courtney, who resides at Montezuma Farm, and Mrs. L. W. Smith, who resides at Frank L. Wells, of Dorchester. He was about seventy-three years old.

No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral. It is probable that it will be buried in the North. "Junky" Smith was a politician and he came out victorious in many a heated battle. And, among the thousands of people who knew him, many ever charged him with being untrue. He never betrayed a trust, and, while he always made a great deal of money, he was much to be admired for his many benefactions to charity. His many benefactions were secretly bestowed and really his work among the poor was never generally known. His friends, however, say that a needy person never was turned down by "Junky" Smith.

As a sport, the State of Virginia probably never produced a better one. A lover of fast horses, Mr. Smith was one of the fastest on the grand circuit. His last racing venture proved disastrous, however. Although he was a lover of thoroughbred racing, he was not a fan of the sport. He was a man of many interests and was a member of the Virginia Athletic Club.

The Triumph of Greens.
A colored man from Georgia had been in Washington a few days when he was arrested for some violation of the city ordinances. Upon arrest of the negro was in jail, the secretary of the colored Y. M. C. A. called the services of a minister to go and see him and sign the prisoner's bond. The minister went to the jail at noon, and told the negro the object of his visit. In response to the proffered bond, the minister said: "I will sign your bond, but I want you to sign mine."
